Students of GEOL 201

Results of the Canary Project, Spring 2024

In this colloquium, students of GEOL 201 will be presenting the results of their research project in a poster session. Their project aimed to identify the magmatic processes that triggered historical volcanic eruptions in the Canary Islands. Students developed their own hypothesis, prepared their own sample, collected data on the scanning electron microscope, and then compiled and interpreted their results before producing their poster. Come and join us to learn and ask questions about their fascinating work.

Snacks and refreshments will be served ☺
