

A Special Conversation and Book Presentation with Michael Feuer '73: How Can Education Protect and Strengthen Democracy?

MONDAY, MAY 6, 2024 • 4:30–5:30 PM
Rathaus Hall, Room 208

MICHAEL FEUER is dean of the Graduate School of Education and Human Development and professor of Education Policy at the George Washington University, past president of the National Academy of Education, and nonresident senior fellow at the Brookings Institution. He came to George Washington in 2010 after a 17-year tenure in leadership roles at the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine. Previously Feuer was senior analyst and project director at the US Congress Office of Technology Assessment. He was appointed by President Obama in 2014 to the National Board for Education Sciences, and is an elected Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and of the American Educational Research Association.

Feuer's research has focused on the economics of education, international comparative assessments, teacher preparation, inequality and academic opportunity, science policy, use of research to inform policy, philanthropy, and civics education. His third book, Can Schools Save Democracy? Civic Education and the Common Good, was published in November 2023.

Feuer's essays, commentaries, book reviews, and poems have appeared in newspapers, blogs, and magazines in the US and abroad. He consults to governments and research organizations in Europe, Israel, and elsewhere. He is also the host of the education podcast, EdFix.

Feuer received his BA in English from Queens College, a MA in public management from the Wharton School, and a PhD in public policy from the University of Pennsylvania. He has been on the faculty of Drexel University and Georgetown. He lives in Washington, DC.
